Tips on picnic safety

By Shirley W. Walton
Extension Agent
Picnic Safety for Labor Day Weekend

Please keep your Labor Day weekend safe by properly handling the food you consume on picnics. There are more than two million cases of bacterial food poisoning in the United States each year. According to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, many of these are the result of improper handling, cooking, cooling or storing of foods.

For example, you may think that delicatessen meats and poultry products are not subject to food poisoning, but, listen, they are. These products include roast beef, pastrami, cooked corned beef, smoked tongue, ham and cooked chicken and turkey. All of these foods are highly perishable. To avoid spoilage, they should be kept cold at below 40°F. or hot at above 140° F.

To prevent the bacteria growth that is responsible for food poisoning, do not leave delicatessen meats or other cooked meat or poultry at room temperature for more than two hours. You cannot see, smell or taste the bacteria that causes food poisoning. So it is of utmost importance that this food be handled carefully.

If you are taking perishable food on a picnic this weekend, pack it in a well insulated cooler with plenty of ice to keep it cool. Place the cooler in a shady spot to keep the ice from melting too quickly. Put any leftovers in the cooler enough ice in the cooler to keep the leftovers safe and cool until you get home.

If you have a homemaking question or problem, you may call 352-8244 or you may write P. O. Box 488, Appomattox, Va. 24522.

Have a good week!

For consumers
Home sewing month planned

By Ocie M. Mack
Extension Agent

Consumers are invited to celebrate National Home Sewing Month along with educators, manufacturers, and retailers in recognizing and promoting the benefits of home sewing. Sewing helps you to:

•save money •look terrific •make gifts •relax •and most of all you have fun •own more clothes •decorate your home •explore a career •express your creativity

Home sewing helps one to develop creativity with ease. You don't have to be a Rembrandt, Shakespeare, or Mozart to express your creativity. You don't even have to be a Geoffrey Beene, Evan Picone or Liz Claiborne. All you have to do is join the growing number of people who are economically creating an up-to-date wardrobe and custom decorated home interior, by turning, or returning to sewing.

Sewing is a creative activity which has universal appeal. A wide variety of new products, which are readily available in most sewing stores, make sewing easier and more enticing than ever before, including patterns for everything from top designer styles to children's toys to home decorating, fabrics that range from the newest on the fashion scene to traditional and easy-care materials, and sewing machines and notions that can make the project quick, easy and professional looking.

That's why there's so much excitement about National Sewing Month: September 1982. It's a celebraton of "Creativity with Ease," sponsored by the American Home Sewing Association (a non-profit organization). Even those who don't already sew are looking into the opportunities it offers.

If you are interested in sewing programs, visit or call the Appomattox Extension Office at 352-8244. Sewing is a most fashionable indoor sport.
